Polymerforschung Dresden

FRIENDS
OF IPF

Established in 1992, the non-profit Association of Supporters of the IPF has been dedicated to fostering connections between friends, staff and partners of the institute.

Our aims:

- 1) Ensuring that members are informed about the latest developments in IPF research
- 2) Recognizing outstanding achievements by IPF scientists
- 3) Facilitating scientific exchange through various formats

FORGING CONNECTIONS ACROSS
ACADEMIA, INDUSTRY AND CIVIL SOCIETY

Being a FRIEND OF IPF provides you with

- up-to-date information on current trends in polymer research and IPF activities
- personal connections with IPF staff and members of the Association of Supporters
- exclusive access to inspiring events
- opportunities to participate in innovative research projects at the institute
- rapid transfer of research findings to industry
- for former IPF team members: a means to maintain connections with the institute and fellow alumni

LARGE MOLECULES INTO GREAT MATERIALS

Polymer Research at IPF

Polymers enable the creation of materials that drive a multitude of innovative technologies.

The IPF's research program centers around fundamental and applied polymer research towards advanced materials.

Together with partners in Dresden, within the Leibniz Association and beyond, we address technology challenges related to resources, health, and information.

Structured into five institutes, the IPF accommodates a growing number of independent (junior) research groups exploring innovative topics and methodologies.

Our dedication to technology transfer is manifested through our partnerships with industrial entities and the establishment of numerous spin-offs. This ensures that the fruits of our research find their way into practical applications.
