

Transient binding of small molecules to macromolecules

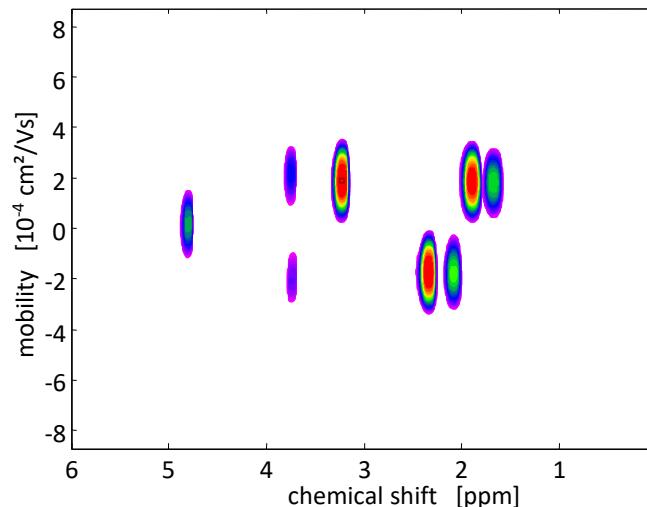

Transient binding of ligands plays an important role in biochemical processes. It is investigated by a combination of diffusion and electrophoresis NMR, which reveals the impact of the electrostatic interaction on the binding. The time average of both diffusion coefficient and electrophoretic mobility reflects a weighted average between free and bound state.

Diffusion NMR

Electrophoresis NMR

Wir freuen uns auf eure Rückmeldung!

Dr. Ulrich Scheler
scheler@ipfdd.de